Dear BTOP proposal reviewer,

This is a letter of support for the Arizona State Library, Archives and Public Records' proposal to establish/expand the public access computer center through the BTOP grant of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009.

Our libraries have public access computers that are utilized for the purposes of re-careering, educational purposes, researching government information, e-mails and social networking, but the demand greatly outstrips our current resources. Oftentimes our libraries are the only place that the public can come to, to access the internet and use the computers, free of cost. We serve people of all ages, ethnicity and socio-economic strata within the community. Computer centers, to train the community, on the much needed skills for the 21st century is in great demand.

The State Library has also invested in a number of e-resources that are delivered via the broadband and the public access computers to the community.

Our libraries have always been serving as anchor institutions in our community. Access to higher bandwidth, computers, e-resources and trainings, in our public libraries will significantly enhance our mission to serve our community. These public access computers will be used, for homework-help, job and career related trainings, re-careering, small business development, training people to use these resources from home, thus supporting the objectives of the Recovery Act - to spur job creation, stimulate long-term economic growth and opportunity and motivate broadband adoption.

The Arizona State Library has a track record of managing grants and helping public libraries, with the tools we require to serve the needs of our community. We are delighted to partner with the State Library and appreciate the opportunity to provide this enhanced service to our community.

Sincerely,

Dear BTOP proposal reviewer,

On behalf of the Pima County Public Library I am writing in support of the Arizona State Library, Archives and Public Records' proposal to establish/expand the public access computer centers through the BTOP grant of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009.

Pima County Public Library has requested support for computer centers serving two rural communities and three urban underserved communities. In our rural areas the library is often the only place where residents can access the Internet. Many of the homes in these areas are limited to dial up access. In our urban centers serving low income areas the library is often the only place that youth can access the Internet outside of school. The Library provides access to online homework help and electronic resources to support research assignments. The Pima County Public Library currently offers English Language classes, GED instruction, citizenship classes, job clubs and computer classes. In support of these classes the library subscribes to online learning tools that provide adults with tools to study and practice between classes.

Computer centers in libraries help to equal the playing field for adults who are seeking jobs, learning new skills that help them compete in the marketplace as well as for young people who study and complete homework in our libraries. The Library serves the entire community and in these particular communities, additional computers are needed to keep up with demand.

Pima County Public Library serves over one million people across a 9,000 sq. mile county. Those in rural areas come to the library to stay connected to their communities and to share information. In urban, stressed communities the public library serves as a resource where people of all ages take part in their community and access information that can improve their life circumstances. Whether rural or urban, the public library is the center of the community, a hub for information and a gathering place where people interact and engage in the life of their community. Increased access to the Internet through higher bandwidth and training to increase knowledge and computer skills will contribute to the individuals using these computers as well as to the community as a whole. Public access computers are used, for homework-help, job and career related trainings, re-careering, small business development, thus supporting the objectives of the Recovery Act - to spur job creation, stimulate long-term economic growth and opportunity and motivate broadband adoption.

Pima County Public Library has worked with the Arizona State Library on other partnerships and we are grateful for their leadership in applying for these funds. The Arizona State Library has a track record for successfully managing grants and assisting public libraries in meeting the needs of our communities. We are delighted to partner with the State Library and appreciate the opportunity to provide this enhanced service to our community.

Computer centers, to train the community, on the much needed skills for the 21st century is in great demand. For the last four years, we have held free basic skills classes on our public computers. The classes are full and very popular but whenever we do them we are blocking other users from computer access for hours.

The State Library has also invested in a number of e-resources that are delivered via the broadband and the public access computers to the community. Our citizens use these databases and resources through the library because a majority of local citizens do not own computers.

RE: Support to the "BTOP Grant reviewer" – supporting the enhancement of Public Access Computers in the Public Libraries

Dear Muralidharan,

The Arizona Department of Commerce is pleased to support the Broadband Technology Opportunities Program in its purpose to enhance the public access of computers in the public libraries. We believe that this will provide the much-needed assistance to the business community who wishes to receive the necessary training to remain competitive in these tough economic times.

The completion in 2011 of BTOP will greatly support the relationships between Workforce Connections, One-Stops, business communities, community college and the Libraries in rural Arizona. Since rural Arizona does not have high speed broadband access either because it is prohibitively expensive or because it is unavailable, it is vital that all our libraries are up-to-date with technology. Computer access at the libraries is a key component for the sustainability of our communities, as a place where people can go for government information, for home-work assignments, for doing their business and banking, for keeping in touch with the troops overseas, for job search, training on using computers and the skills needed for the 21st Century.

The Arizona Department of Commerce relationship with libraries has been long and productive. We have worked with Pima, Maricopa and Pinal Libraries that have made of our programs successful.

Thank you for the opportunity to participate with you in this State wide effort.

Sincerely,

Rosalyn Boxer
